Dear Russell:

The Binghamton Community Center for Television Production has been a great service to the people of Central New York, especially the Binghamton area. They show concern for real community access to the video arts. Many video groups propound the doctrine of "free access," but Ralph Hocking's group is an actual practitioner of this ideal.

They have generously supported our growing program with free hardware loans and technical assistance, and have done likewise for others in the area. The Binghamton Community Center for Television Production richly deserves your continued support.

Sincerely yours,

David A. Ross
